WHAT YOU SHOULD EXPECT (from a Quality System Provider)

Personal Site Visit Quality system design requires input from you – the customer – after all, who knows your interests and key aspects of your business better than you? GuardDog will conduct a thorough site survey, make a careful layout sketch of your facility and ask many questions to make certain we fully understand your interests and requirements.

Detailed Proposal There is no more effective way to communicate quality system design than with a well written proposal. The proposal should include complete system components listing, a detailed camera layout (to scale with fields of view clearly identified), detailed specifications for each component, system pricing, any appropriate terms and conditions and, if desired by the customer, a lease option to straight cash

Professional Installation System performance is assured today – and well into the future - when the job's done right. We use only the industry's top-shelf materials, our video ends are terminated with crimp-on connectors (none of the screw-in type that are prone to problems) and we never let our wire drape across the unseen side of your drop ceiling. The GuardDog philosophy: "If it's worth doing, it's worth doing right!"

After the Sale Service Quality system providers stand behind their product and their workmanship. At no additional cost to you GuardDog Surveillance Systems returns to optimize your system 30-days after initial installation and again 90-days later. Why do we make this commitment? Because we want you to understand that selecting GuardDog is the right buying decision. Our guarantee is the "peace of mind" that comes from you knowing that as time passes, we'll be there as your partner, assuring that you're completely satisfied with all operational aspects of your new equipment and that our system continues to protect your investment over time.

Call us if you need service on your existing system.
